About Lansing Symphony Orchestra

Formed in 1929, Lansing Symphony Orchestra (LSO) is widely recognized as one of mid-Michigan's cultural gems. Now in its 95th season, the LSO continues to strive to reach audiences on a personal level, letting the power of live music do the talking. LSO fulfills its mission of "enriching lives through excellence in music and in education outreach" by presenting numerous public performances, including MasterWorks, Pops, Chamber Music, Family Series, and Neighborhood Concerts. Besides presenting the finest in orchestral performances, the LSO is committed to taking an active role in the development of music education programming for our community, and our nationally recognized education programs reach preschoolers to adults. In order to achieve and maintain a high-level of artistic excellence, LSO employs approximately 70 professional musicians who have won competitive auditions for their positions. Maestro Timothy Muffitt has served as the Conductor and Music Director of the LSO since 2005.

Viridis (formerly Women's Glee Club) is Latin for 'green' and a performing ensemble of treble voices consisting primarily of non-music majors that performs several times throughout the academic year. Performing a vast array of music—from Renaissance through contemporary—Viridis participates in in-state festivals and often collaborates with ensembles from other universities. The ensemble is open without audition to all treble singers on the MSU campus.

The Singing Spartans (formerly Men's Glee Club) brings together singers from across campus to sing outstanding repertoire for this ensemble configuration. Singing Spartans has been the featured ensemble at conferences of the American Choral Director's Association including national conferences and the Central Division regional conference. Other juried performances include the national conference of the Intercollegiate Men's Choruses. The ensemble has regularly toured Europe to include Czech Republic and Slovak Republic, Hungary, Austria, Germany, France, Netherlands, and the UK.
